The accessibility of electronic and information technology to disabled individuals has been a question facing colleges and universities for years. The Rehabilitation Act, amended in 1998, includes Section 508, which requires federal agencies and departments to consider their end-user when developing, procuring, maintaining, or using electronic and information technology.

This free 60-minute webinar, presented by the Higher Education Council of the Employment Law Alliance, will address the current state of the law with regard to making technology accessible to individuals with disabilities, the implications for your institution, and how you can protect your institution from claims from employees, students, and visitors. The speakers will provide practical insight and guidance on the following:

- Section 508's applicability to colleges and universities.
- The Assistive Technology Act and its impact on compliance requirements.
- Higher education's duty to provide access to technology under the Americans with Disabilities Act and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act.
- Overview of, and complying with Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG)
- What you need to know and do in providing electronic and information technology access to disabled individuals.
