Product Litigation + Discovery Management

When products become the focus of national legal attention, it is essential that your defense be carefully coordinated, both in order to ensure the application of a uniform strategy as well as to maximize efficiency and economies of scale. This is particularly important when dealing with discovery, where timely, accurate and complete discovery efforts are an essential part of avoiding the pitfalls of the litigation process, and to ensuring that your team is prepared to aggressively present your side of the case in motion practice, settlement conference and trial. The Miller Canfield Product Safety Group specializes in representing product manufacturers as national coordinating and discovery counsel.
