Jeffrey S. Aronoff specializes in all types of public finance, including municipal infrastructure finance, economic development finance and school finance. He also regularly advises governmental clients on general matters including economic development initiatives, public-private collaboration, legislative drafting, and the establishment and ongoing operation of intergovernmental and regional authorities.

"My job is not simply to spot and address the issues my clients have not identified, but also to understand and consider the ones they have."

Jeffrey S. Aronoff

EXPERIENCE

Jeff guided a regional public authority through the process of taking over the role of a predecessor authority that had been dissolved. He helped the client navigate a difficult maze of limitations and requirements imposed by various federal and state regulatory agencies, which had the potential to choke off all funds to the client, threatening its survival. In the end, the client assumed all the powers and resources it needed to move forward on important policy objectives.

"I helped the client identify and leverage allies while minimizing the impact of adversaries throughout its months-long transition process. I worked with the client through a daunting process that was full of esoteric regulatory requirements, state law issues and difficult questions of policy and pragmatism."
