John L. Senica's practice is concentrated in the areas of corporate law, commercial lending, business acquisitions and real estate law. He has extensive experience in business planning, business organizations, and mergers and acquisitions, as well as drafting and negotiating all forms of contracts including stock and asset agreements, security agreements, loan agreements, distributorship arrangements, partnership agreements, real estate contracts and commercial leases.

John represents lenders in secured commercial loan transactions, select business entities in partnership and franchise matters, and has assisted in serving as bond counsel and counsel to issuers, underwriters and borrowers in connection with publicly offered and privately placed issues of tax-exempt revenue bonds involving municipalities, health-care institutions, and manufacturing facilities. During his career he has established long-standing relationships in the finance, private equity and venture capital areas.

"I believe in going beyond the traditional role of counsel in that I serve as a trusted business adviser to many clients, offering them virtually around-the-clock counsel on a variety of problems affecting their daily business lives. I take a proactive approach to finding business opportunities for clients and am constantly seeking to facilitate introductions and add value to our services."
