Timothy J. Engling concentrates his practice in patent, trademark and copyright protection as well as business transaction, intellectual property-related litigation, litigation avoidance, opinions and licensing. Admitted to practice before the United States Patent and Trademark Office, he is authorized to practice patent law in the U.S. and trademark law in the U.S. and Canada. He counsels his clients on intellectual property issues, including preparing and prosecuting applications; rendering patentability, design around, patent validity and infringement opinions; analyzing use and registrability of trademarks; and negotiating and drafting of patent, trademark and copyright agreements. In addition, Tim handles intellectual property aspects of corporate mergers and acquisitions and performs related due diligence.

"I am committed to understanding clients and their businesses. I partner with them to fulfill their needs, address concerns, attain goals and achieve success. Recognizing my role is part of a greater plan, I value relationships of mutual trust, growth and care."

Tim Engling

EXPERIENCE

With a technical background in the mechanical and electromechanical arts, Tim enjoys smart, innovative, entrepreneurial and creative people, which complements his passion of intellectual property law. In representing the manufacturer of a very successful kitchen gadget, Tim conducted patentability searches, helped design around other products, and prepared, filed and obtained patent protection. With the right to exclude others, the unique and innovative product achieved acclaim and sold well. Further, when infringed, the client enforced its patent rights to stop infringers and collect damages.
