

COMMITTEE NEWS

Employment and Labor Law

Diversity & Inclusion: Strategies for Progress in the Workplace

The May 25, 2020 killing of George Floyd sparked anger, fear, and renewed conversations about racial injustice. Protests and attention from around the globe prompted employers to rethink and prioritize efforts to combat racism and promoting diversity and inclusion. Employers have a renewed focus on forging a more equitable future. To help better understand the issue, Kate Bally, Director of Labor & Employment, Thomson Reuters, Practical Law, sat down with Sophia Khan, Thomson Reuters Vice President, Diversity & Inclusion.

Sophia Khan
Thomson Reuters

Vice President Diversity and Inclusion

Prior to joining Thomson Reuters, Sophia was leading the Global Inclusion, Diversity and Engagement

How do you define diversity and inclusion (D&I), and how do those terms differ?

Diversity is a fact, what makes us unique. It's about all of us. When we show up to work each day, we each bring a different perspective to the table. What we say and the way we act pulls from our experience and makes us diverse.

Read more on page 9

In This Issue

- Diversity & Inclusion: Strategies for Progress in the Workplace 1
- Civil Rights Ruling Delivers Historic Victory for LGBT Employees 3
- The Black Lives Matter (BLM) Movement and the Workplace 4

F I N D Y O U R C O M M U N I T Y

TIPS CONNECT

ambar.org/tipsconnect

Connect with Employment and Labor Law

website

Stay Connected with TIPS

We encourage you to stay up-to-date on important Section news, TIPS meetings and events and important topics in your area of practice by following TIPS on Twitter @ABATIPS, joining our groups on LinkedIn, following us on Instagram, and visiting our YouTube page! In addition, you can easily connect with TIPS substantive committees on these various social media outlets by clicking on any of the links.

©2020 American Bar Association, Tort Trial & Insurance Practice Section, 321 North Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois 60654; (312) 988-5607. All rights reserved.

The opinions herein are the authors' and do not necessarily represent the views or policies of the ABA, TIPS or the Employment and Labor Law Committee. Articles should not be reproduced without written permission from the Copyrights & Contracts office copyright@americanbar.org.

Editorial Policy: This Newsletter publishes information of interest to members of the Employment and Labor Law Committee of the Tort Trial & Insurance Practice Section of the American Bar Association — including reports, personal opinions, practice news, developing law and practice tips by the membership, as well as contributions of interest by nonmembers. Neither the ABA, the Section, the Committee, nor the Editors endorse the content or accuracy of any specific legal, personal, or other opinion, proposal or authority.

Copies may be requested by contacting the ABA at the address and telephone number listed above.

Civil Rights Ruling Delivers Historic Victory for LGBT Employees

Until recently, the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) employees in the workplace have been, at best, uncertain. The Supreme Court decision in Bostock v. Clayton County, Georgia<sup>1</sup> changed that. In light of the decision, the rule is clear: Under Title VII, an LGBT employee can no longer be discriminated against on the basis of sexual orientation or gender identity.

1. Background

Just over five years ago, in Obergefell v. Hodges<sup>2</sup>, the Supreme Court declared that same-sex couples have the same fundamental right to marry as couples of the opposite sex. The question of equal rights for LGBT individuals came to the Court with the acknowledgment that they had undertaken a long stigmatized, demeaning, and arduous journey just to be legally recognized:

Until the mid-20th century, same-sex intimacy long had been condemned as immoral by the state itself in most Western nations, a belief often embodied in the criminal law. For this reason, among others, many persons did not deem homosexuals to have dignity in their own distinct identity. A truthful declaration by same-sex couples of what was in their hearts had to remain unspoken. Even when a greater awareness of the humanity and integrity of homosexual persons came in the period after World War II, the argument that gays and lesbians had a just claim to dignity was in conflict with both law and widespread social conventions. Same-sex intimacy remained a crime in many States. Gays and lesbians were prohibited from most government employment, barred from military service, excluded under immigration laws, targeted by police, and burdened in their rights to associate.

For much of the 20th century, moreover, homosexuality was treated as an illness. When the American Psychiatric Association published the first Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders in 1952, homosexuality was classified as a mental disorder, a position adhered to until 1973. Only in more recent years have psychiatrists and others recognized that sexual orientation is both a normal expression of human sexuality and immutable.

Read more on page 13

Nhan Ho

Miller Canfield Paddock and Stone, PLC

Nhan Ho is an associate in the Labor and Employment Group of Miller Canfield Paddock and Stone, PLC in Detroit, Michigan. Her practice concentrates on employment discrimination, leave rights, and wage and hour litigation and disputes. She regularly counsels employers on their policies and practices to address specific challenges in the workplace.

The Black Lives Matter (BLM) Movement and the Workplace

The Black Lives Matter (BLM) movement began in July 2013 after the acquittal of George Zimmerman in the death of Trayvon Martin. BLM—both as a social movement and as a loosely constituted chapter organization—has most recently been a constant fixture in the news since the death of George Floyd in Minnesota. Employers across the nation are grappling with the appropriate way to deal with the many issues raised by the BLM movement—issues involving workplace diversity, racial justice, the criminal justice system, and systemic discrimination. They are trying to determine what they can do as organizations to both support the BLM movement and their employees of color, while at the same time maintaining workplace harmony without alienating other employees, customers, or other constituents. Employers' concerns seem to revolve around two central themes: company leaders speaking out about or taking action in support of the BLM movement or employer regulation of BLM images in the workplace on clothing or other paraphernalia.

Employers actively supporting the BLM movement through statements, donations, or community action should be mindful of several important concepts. First, employers should be aware that there will likely be critical and/or unexpected feedback about the employer's actions (whatever they are) from employees, vendors, customers, or other constituents. For some, the expressed support may be too far reaching, while others may believe that the support does not go far enough. For these reasons, employers should clearly and carefully articulate their core values as part of their expressed support for BLM and only take actions that are consistent with these expressed values. Whether investing in local organizations promoting racial equity, creating internship or pipeline initiatives to recruit people of color, creating Employee Resource Groups (ERGs) as part of a diversity initiatives, or just expressing a belief in the BLM movement through public or private statements—employers should be sure to explain how their support squares with their organizational values and aligns with their business goals. If the support for BLM seems forced, disingenuous or insincere—the employer's support will be unsuccessful and tend to discourage rather than inspire employees.

Second, employers should realize that their initial discussions or manifestations of support will likely be the beginning of a much broader, and sometimes very difficult, conversation. Many organizations are finding that pent up frustrations and past indignities are being included in discussions regarding the BLM movement. One best practice for employers to consider is providing consistent and regular opportunities for healthy workplace dialogue (i.e. town-halls, listening sessions and/

Luther Wright, Jr.
Ogletree Deakins

Luther Wright, Jr. is a Nashville-based labor and employment attorney with Ogletree Deakins. Wright is a member of the firm's Learning Solutions team where he delivers a number of supervisor/employee trainings. He can be reached by email at luther.wright@ogletree.com.

or facilitated conversations) that will allow the issues raised by the BLM movement to be respectfully and meaningfully discussed in the workplace. Employers should likewise be aware that their support for the BLM movement will likely lead to more intense scrutiny of their racial equity practices by employees, other constituents, and potentially the media. Thus, employers should be prepared to answer questions about their workplace practices, particularly those instances where their actions might seem inconsistent with articulated aspirational goals. Employers should also review relevant policies and practices for opportunities to become more fair and equitable as an organization.

Employers should also ensure that all employees are well-trained on respect in the workplace principles and that supervisors are trained in de-escalation techniques. There have been anecdotal incidents where disagreements about BLM have degenerated into loud shouting matches in the workplace, or in rarer incidents, more severe workplace violence incidents. More frequently, these more intense discussions play out on social media platforms and impact the workplace via concerns about workplace safety or third-party complaints regarding specific employee comments or posts. A best practice here is for employers to critically review their social media policies and ensure compliance with the same, including investigation of all complaints.

The display of BLM images in the workplace via decals, facial coverings, or clothing has also become an increasingly controversial subject for many employers. What employees wear or display at work is usually governed by the employer's dress code, workplace conduct policies and/or any applicable laws in the relevant jurisdiction. Employers that support the BLM movement have three discrete options in this area: 1) Disallow all displays or images supporting political movements; 2) Allow all such displays or images consistent with anti-harassment/anti-discrimination policies; or 3) Only allow BLM displays or images while excluding all other displays or images. Each approach provides unique workplace benefits and challenges.

Disallowing all political displays or images in the workplace is the easiest policy for employers to administer. It is a viewpoint neutral policy that treats all political views in the exact same fashion—not allowing them. This practice also has the added benefit of decreasing the likelihood of workplace conflicts between employees with opposing viewpoints. However, employer policies or practices that restrict all political displays and images, which also includes those expressing support for BLM, have been heavily criticized by BLM supporters. Employers that strongly support BLM have found that they cannot simultaneously restrict BLM displays or images without sacrificing some of their credibility.

Similarly, allowing all political displays or images in the workplace is also easy to administer. Like disallowing all such displays or images, this approach is content neutral and treats all viewpoints equally. However, this approach more frequently leads to workplace clashes involving opposing viewpoints or prompts responsive counter-speech. This approach encourages more displays and images and is thought to incentivize employees to express themselves more provocatively in their clothing and workplace displays. The primary concern with this approach is that it can more frequently lead to allegations of harassment as tensions rise, or even complaints about workplace violence to the extent an employee feels threatened or unsafe.

Finally, many employers have decided to allow only expressions of support for BLM (and perhaps similar movements like PRIDE) in the workplace in clothing and displays, but not allow expressions of any other political movements or causes. This typically means disallowing displays or images supporting “All Lives Matter,” “Blue Lives Matter” or “Make America Great Again (MAGA).” These employers are drawing a distinction between supporting BLM and other social/political movements. They assert that BLM is a significant societal movement consistent with its organization values, while the other expressions are “purely political” and/or not consistent with its values. Allowing BLM displays and expressions shows strong support for causes typically important to employees of color, but sometimes alienates employees with opposing or contrary views. This is particularly true in instances where there is discipline associated with other displays or expressions, but not BLM. Employers with this type of policy also open themselves up to more frequent allegations of discrimination/harassment or, in some jurisdictions, even allegations of political discrimination.

In sum, employers desiring to support BLM in its actions, statements, policies, and practices are well advised to think through the issues carefully. Any statements or actions supporting BLM should be well articulated and consistent with the employers’ institutional values. Employers should expect their actions to be heavily scrutinized and questioned, and company leaders should be prepared to answer difficult questions. Dress code and workplace conduct policies should be clearly and thoughtfully drafted or reviewed, and consistently enforced to avoid claims of discrimination or harassment. Selecting the most appropriate ways to support BLM and manage BLM images and displays in the workplace are employer-specific decisions that should not be taken lightly. ➤

The Tort Trial & Insurance Practice Section Introduces a New Advertising Opportunity!

The rates for advertising in this publication are:

AD SIZE OPTIONS	DIMENSIONS	COST
Online Lower Rectangle	920 x 90   300 x 250	$500
Online Middle Rectangle	920 x 90   300 x 250	$650
Online Upper Rectangle	920 x 90   300 x 250	$850

Additional information and print/online advertisement opportunities including discount options and complete media kits can be found by reaching out to M.J. Mrvica Associates, Inc., mjmrvica@mrvica.com

FIND US ON SOCIAL MEDIA

twitter.com/abatips
linkedin.com/groups/55713
youtube.com/user/AmericanBarTIPS

ambar.org/tips

ABA
AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION
Tort Trial and Insurance
Practice Section

DIVERSE SPEAKERS DIRECTORY

Open to both ABA and Non-ABA members.

The Directory allows you to create a customized Speaker Profile and market your experience and skillset to more than 3,500 ABA entities seeking speakers around the country and the world.

Please contact TIPS Staff Norma Campos if you are sourcing speakers or authors for your programs and publications

norma.campos@americanbar.org

ABA
AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION
Tort Trial and Insurance
Practice Section

ABA
AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION
Diversity and Inclusion
Advisory Council

Diversity... Continued from page 1

Inclusion is a choice, it requires action. Inclusion may not come naturally to us. It requires going the extra mile. Like often attracts like, and that may feel more comfortable. What may be harder is challenging our assumptions. Inclusion requires pausing and considering your decisions. It requires questioning yourself. What we do with that is what matters. You must pause and consider your decisions and question yourself. Once you have questioned yourself, you can turn a thoughtful eye toward systems, organizations, and impact.

Why does inclusion matter?

We underestimate the sense of belonging in the workplace. Deals can be unraveled by a single employee who feels like an outsider. An inclusive workplace does not require that everyone gets along. It is a common misconception that inclusion is about perfect harmony. That isn't it at all. Inclusion is about creating healthy teams that welcome new perspectives and accommodate change.

When you have a shared sense of belonging within a diverse collective, you can tap into the best and highest use of talent. Inclusion may feel uncomfortable or prescriptive, but that environment can create opportunities for progress and insight. Diverse and inclusive teams create a healthy tension that can serve as a catalyst for greater perspective, insight, and innovation. Many companies have a diverse client base, and a diverse base of employees is required to see and meet the needs of those customers.

What are the most important features of a successful D&I program (for example, focusing on diversity of applicants, mentors, leaders, etc.)?

The most important element is vision. Success requires having a clear vision from leadership on why diversity and inclusion matters to the organization. Apart from vision, the next most important part is the strategy that will account for positive changes across all metrics. Accountability for execution of that strategy should be made a part of leadership goals. Again, inclusion requires action, and leaders should be on notice that inaction will not suffice.

It isn't always clear what that action should look like, but embracing empathy, allowing for uncomfortable conversations, recognizing there are no perfect solutions can help move employers move toward positive change. Exploring the systems in place and the pieces of that system that accelerate or derail inclusion is vital.

When companies have articulated their vision for diversity and inclusion, they should explore their networks. Do those networks lend themselves to bringing in at Medtronic where she led the development of D&I strategy, goals, and metrics to operationalize strategic outcomes across the regions, business units and global functions.

Before that, she was the Vice President, Organization Effectiveness and Development and Global Strategic Diversity and Inclusion at Wells Fargo. Sophia also worked at 3M Company, PepsiAmericas in both D&I capacity and HR business partner roles.

Sophia earned her bachelor's degree in Economics and Cultural Pluralism, from the University of Minnesota, and a Master of Arts in Human Resources Development with a concentration in Global Organizational Development, from the University of St. Thomas. Sophia lives in Minneapolis with her children, Samina and Arman.

diverse talent? After exploring their network, they should consider the employee life cycle. Does the employee's experience make them want to remain with the organization? Does it give them opportunity for advancement? Do they want to be part of the organization's success? Is there meaningful engagement across sectors of the company? Answering these questions can help determine how best to move forward.

How do you measure progress when it comes to D&I?

We want a workplace where all employees come to work and feel valued for the contributions they make and the person they are. Measuring progress against this goal requires asking employees about their individual workplace experiences. Progress in this arena is subjective, and measurement of it depends on a subjective experience.

It is common for companies to measure progress annually or against a five-year plan. To achieve diversity and promote inclusion, more regular reflection is a better plan. Measuring small increments of success, quarterly or even monthly, can build rigor and create a cadence of forward movement. If plans to achieve goals and assessments of achievement are not on the agenda, they simply will not happen.

Measuring progress does not have to exist only in external surveys and recognition. It can, and ideally should, be embedded into regular meetings and informal conversations. It can be a conversation in a roundtable format. It can be an assessment of promotions, attrition, departures, and hiring. The most important thing is regularly collecting data, feedback and building transparency across the organization. You cannot fix problems you cannot see.

Companies committed to progress should also steer clear of leaning on councils and affinity groups to tackle diversity and inclusion challenges. Outsourcing the hard work of creating an equitable and welcoming corporate culture to a smaller subset of the company will rarely create meaningful change. Leadership at the top must take responsibility.

Did George Floyd's killing change the conversation about D&I in the workplace, and if so, how?

Absolutely. It is not entirely clear why Mr. Floyd's killing drew national attention when so many injustices before him did not. It was a moment we did not expect, but this tragedy became a global headline immediately, and people finally seemed to say, "enough is enough." It was a cultural tipping point during which people could no longer fall back on apathy.

---

When you have a shared sense of belonging within a diverse collective, you can tap into the best and highest use of talent. Inclusion may feel uncomfortable or prescriptive, but that environment can create opportunities for progress and insight.

---

People from all backgrounds had to acknowledge that violence against people of color was happening regularly. Across the globe, we had to acknowledge the problem, and it meant, among many other things, refocusing on how these inequities play out in the workplace.

What are effective ways to get company leaders to support D&I values and initiatives?

Many people ask me how do we make this more than a moment? It requires courage. We need leaders to put aside politics and set a tone for finding common ground. People look to leaders for how to digest world events, and leaders that make caring about racial injustice optional will never inspire change. Those in power need to issue declarative statements about company values and what it intends to do to promote those values.

This new era of remote work arrangements presents many new challenges, and D&I goals are no exception. What are remote workplace strategies for promoting a diverse and inclusive workplace?

Think of who is talking and who is not. Managers can open a dialog if they are willing to hang back and let others speak. Brevity and silence can be useful tools to encourage conversation. Give people time to prepare for meetings. Personalize conversations so employees know you care about their individual experience. It is rare that managers put a premium on listening. Employees do not expect managers to be perfect, and it can be a sign of strength to admit to subordinates that you do not have all the answers. Trying is better than stagnating. ➤

The Tort Trial & Insurance Practice Section Introduces a New Advertising Opportunity!

The rates for advertising in this publication are:

AD SIZE OPTIONS	DIMENSIONS	COST
1/4 PAGE	3.625" x 4.625"	$650.00
1/3 PAGE	3.625" x 3.0625"	$850.00
1/2 PAGE	7.375" x 4.625"	$1,250.00
1/2 PAGE ISLAND	3.625" x 9.375"	$1,500.00
2/3 PAGE	3.625" x 6.25"	$1,800.00
FULL PAGE	8.375" x 10.875"	$2,400.00
INSIDE BACK COVER	8.375" x 10.875"	$2,750.00
INSIDE FRONT COVER	8.375" x 10.875"	$3,000.00
BACK COVER	8.375" x 10.875"	$3,500.00

Additional information and print/online advertisement opportunities including discount options and complete media kits can be found by reaching out to M.J. Mrvica Associates, Inc., mjmrvica@mrvica.com

THE BRIEF

Civil Rights... Continued from page 3

In the late 20th century, following substantial cultural and political developments, same-sex couples began to lead more open and public lives and to establish families. This development was followed by a quite extensive discussion of the issue in both governmental and private sectors and by a shift in public attitudes toward greater tolerance. As a result, questions about the rights of gays and lesbians soon reached the courts, where the issue could be discussed in the formal discourse of the law.

In addition to these burdens, studies have shown that, compared to their heterosexual counterparts, LGBT persons are more socioeconomically disadvantaged.<sup>3</sup> They are more likely to live in poverty, be unemployed, uninsured, food insecure, and have lower incomes.<sup>4</sup> These realities highlight additional inequalities and the need for change.

Even though LGBT rights have been advanced significantly with the Supreme Court decision in Obergefell, until now, there has been no uniform directive at the federal level to protect LGBT employees from discrimination in the workplace. Sex discrimination in the workplace has been prohibited under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII), but federal courts disagreed on whether discrimination “because of ... sex” included discrimination based on sexual orientation or transgender identity.<sup>5</sup>

In the absence of a clear federal safeguard, many states and local governments stepped up with laws and ordinances prohibiting workplace sexual orientation and gender identity discrimination (see e.g., State Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity and Expression Discrimination Laws Chart: Overview). Historically, however, millions of LGBT workers living in jurisdictions without similar government directives were still left unprotected and could be legally discriminated against at work because of their sexual orientation and gender identity.<sup>6</sup>

2. *Bostock v. Clayton County, Georgia

On June 15, 2020, the Supreme Court put an end to this uncertainty in Bostock v. Clayton County, Georgia.<sup>7</sup> In a 6-3 decision, the Court held that Title VII prohibits employers from discharging or otherwise taking an adverse employment action against an employee solely because the employee is gay or transgender. Reading the plain meaning of the Title VII, Justice Gorsuch wrote that when an employer intentionally takes an adverse action against an employee because of the employee’s sexual orientation or gender identity, the employer is unavoidably engaging in unlawful discrimination “because of sex.” In response to the employers’ argument that the drafters of Title VII could have not envisioned the application of the statute to LGBT persons, the Court conceded the possibility, but concluded that the law, as written, unambiguously applies nonetheless.

Bostock, at long last, legally recognized LGBT workers' employment rights under federal law. However, the decision is not without limits. Title VII applies only to employers with 15 or more employees.<sup>8</sup> Many state laws prohibiting sex-based discrimination apply to employers with fewer employees, but employees of smaller employers in states without LGBT protections may remain legally vulnerable. However, states with anti-discrimination laws that do not specifically protect LGBT persons may find that courts look to Bostock for guidance. If so, an estimated additional 3.6 million LGBT employees would become part of an otherwise unrecognized protected class.<sup>9</sup>

As acknowledged by Justice Alito in his dissent, with which Justice Thomas concurred,<sup>10</sup> the impact of Bostock to LGBT individuals could be much broader than just employment. Federal and state laws also prohibit sex-based discrimination in other important aspects of life, including housing,<sup>11</sup> health care,<sup>12</sup> education,<sup>13</sup> and credit transactions.<sup>14</sup> The argument in favor of protections in those contexts is stronger in light of Bostock.<sup>15</sup>

3. What Now?

The Court in Bostock adjudicated the most straightforward instances of discrimination, because the employers therein unapologetically agreed that the LGBT employees were terminated because of their sexual orientation and gender identity. As a practical matter and especially in light of Bostock, it will be rare for an employer to admit that an adverse employment action was taken against an LGBT employee because of his or her sexual orientation or gender identity. In those cases, the familiar burden-shifting framework set forth in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green<sup>16</sup> will apply.

Not all questions were resolved by the Bostock decision. The Court avoided opining on some topics, including gender-segregated bathrooms, locker rooms, and dress codes.<sup>17</sup> However, one of the most important civil rights questions of our time was firmly established: sexual orientation and gender identity are characteristics protected by Title VII. For employers that have not taken actions to prevent disparate treatment of and impact on LGBT employees, now is the time to do so.

Employers should review their policies and practices, such as anti-discrimination, anti-harassment, and leave policies, as well as employee benefits (e.g., health insurance), to make sure that they are inclusive of LGBT employees. Employers should also train their supervisors and managers and help them understand the necessity of treating LGBT employees fairly and equally as with other employees, as well as not taking into account the employees' sexual orientation and gender identity in making employment decisions. Proactive employers can designate a position, committee or affinity group dedicated to developing, promoting, and consistently implementing diversity and inclusion messages and policies within the organization, including those specifically supporting LGBT workers, such as a Gender Transition Plan and a Gender Transition In The Workplace Policy. Employers can also embrace diversity and inclusions principles at the top among leadership.

4. Conclusion

As recognized in Obergefell, what has been asked by the LGBT community is rather simple, yet challenging to obtain: "They ask for equal dignity in the eyes of the law."<sup>18</sup> Bostock is a momentous decision because it not only it confirms the rights of LGBT employees to be treated fairly in their workplaces, it also has the potential of opening the door to equality in other aspects of life. After years of patchwork challenges, there is now clarity about the bounds of Title VII, and with it, a new respect formally recognized under the law for the LGBT community.

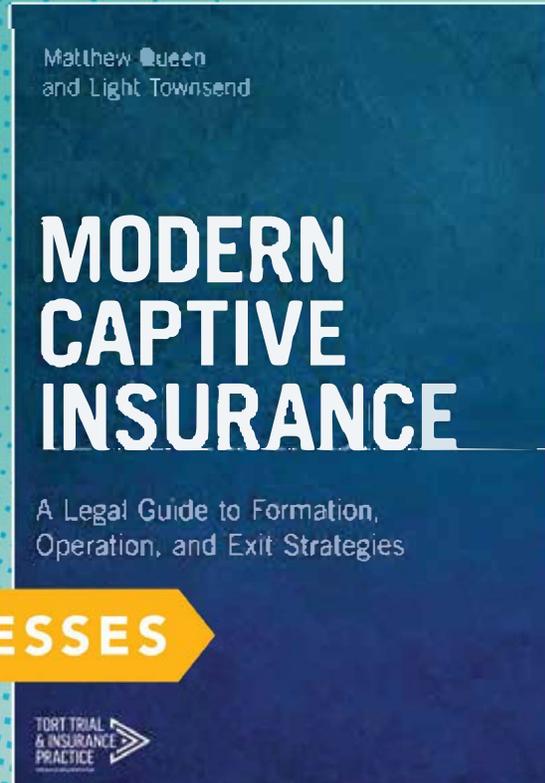

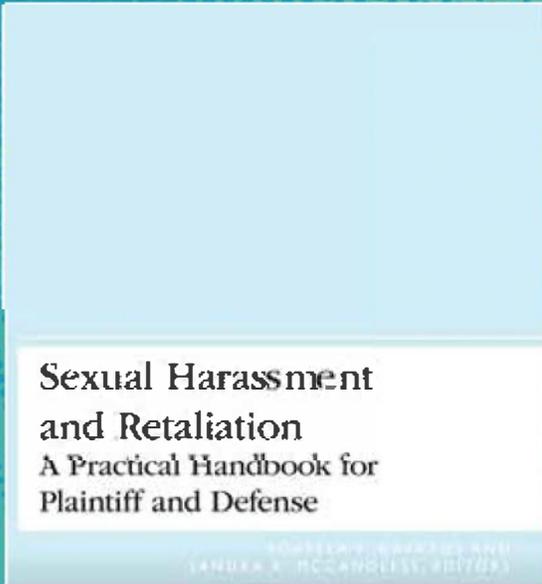

---

Endnotes

- 1 140 S. Ct. 1731 (2020).
- 2 135 S. Ct. 2584 (2015). In Bostock, even the dissent recognized that "it is painful to be reminded of the way our society once treated gay and lesbians." Bostock, 140 S. Ct. at 1769-71 (Alito, J., dissenting).
- 3 See Am. Psychol. Ass'n., Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Persons & Socioeconomic Status (2017), <https://www.apa.org/pi/ses/resources/publications/factsheet-lgbt.pdf> (last accessed Aug. 4, 2020).
- 4 Id.; see also UCLA, LGBT Data & Demographics, <https://williamsinstitute.law.ucla.edu/visualization/lgbt-stats/?topic=LGBT#density> (last accessed Aug. 4, 2020).
- 5 Compare Bostock v. Clayton Cty. Bd. of Commissioners, 723 F. App'x 964 (11th Cir. 2018), and Evans v. Georgia Reg'l Hosp., 850 F.3d 1248, 1255 (11th Cir. 2017), with Zarda v. Altitude Express, Inc., 883 F.3d 100, 112 (2d Cir. 2018), and Equal Employment Opportunity Comm'n v. R.G. & G.R. Harris Funeral Homes, Inc., 884 F.3d 560 (6th Cir. 2018).
- 6 Kerith J. Conron and Shoshana K. Goldberg, LGBT People in the US Not Protected By State Non-Discrimination Statute, UCLA Sch. of Law William Inst., <https://williamsinstitute.law.ucla.edu/publications/lgbt-nondiscrimination-statutes/> (Apr. 2020).
- 7 140 S. Ct. 1731 (2020).
- 8 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b). There are exemptions from Title VII employment discrimination requirement for foreign nationals working abroad and certain employees of religious organizations. 42 U.S.C §2000e-1.
- 9 Christy Mallory, Luis A. Vasquez, and Celia Meredith, Legal Protections for LGBT People After Bostock v. Clayton County, UCLA Sch. of Law William Inst., <https://williamsinstitute.law.ucla.edu/publications/state-nd-laws-after-bostock/> (Jul. 2020) (last accessed Aug. 4, 2020).
- 10 Bostock, 140 S. Ct. at 1778.
- 11 E.g., the Fair Housing Act of 1968, as amended by the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988, 42 U.S.C. §3601 et seq.
- 12 E.g., Section 1557 of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, 42 U.S.C. §18116. Interestingly, just a few days before Bostock was decided, the Department of Health and Human Services revised its Section 1557 regulations to exclude from the definition of sex as its relates to the section sexual orientation and gender identity.
- 13 E.g., Title IX of the Education Amendment Act of 1972, 20 U.S.C §1681 et seq.
- 14 E.g., Equal Credit Opportunity Act, 15 U.S.C §1691.
- 15 See Mallory, supra n. 10
- 16 411 U.S. 792, 802 (1973).
- 17 Bostock, 140 S. Ct. at 1753.
- 18 135 S. Ct. 2584, 2608.

CHECK OUT WHAT'S NEW FROM TIPS

ABA
AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION
Tort Trial and Insurance
Practice Section

HOT OFF THE PRESSES

MORE NEW TITLES

FIND ALL TIPS BOOKS

www.ShopABA.org / 800-285-2221

ABA
AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION
Tort Trial and Insurance
Practice Section

Calendar

October 26, 2020	The Federal Program to Deregulate Slaughterhouses and It's Effects on Animals, Workers, &amp; Consumers Contact: Danielle Daly – 312/988-5708	Virtual Programming
November 5-6, 2020	Fidelity &amp; Surety Law Fall Conference Danielle Daly – 312/988-5708	Virtual Programming
November 10, 2020	Toxic Torts &amp; Environmental Law Conference Contact: Janet Hummons – 312/988-5656 Danielle Daly – 312/988-5708	Virtual Programming
November 18, 2020	Insurance Regulation Federalization of Insurance Contact: Danielle Daly – 312/988-5708	Virtual Programming
December 7, 2020	Preparation, Risks, and Controls of Reopening in a Covid World: It's a Small World After All Contact: Danielle Daly – 312/988-5708	Virtual Programming
January 2021, TBD	Life Health &amp; Disability Contact: Danielle Daly – 312/988-5708	Virtual Programming
February 3-5, 2021	Fidelity &amp; Surety Law Midwinter Conference Contact: Janet Hummons: 312/988-5656	Virtual Programming
February 10-14, 2021	Insurance Coverage Litigation Midyear Conference Contact: Janet Hummons – 312/988-5656 Danielle Daly – 312/988-5708	Omni Resort Montelucia Scottsdale, AZ
February 17-22, 2021	ABA Midyear Meeting Contact: Janet Hummons – 312-988-5656	Hyatt Regency Chicago Chicago, IL
March 10-12, 2021	Transportation Mega Conference XV Contact: Janet Hummons – 312/988-5656	Sheraton New Orleans New Orleans, LA
March 12-13, 2021	Admiralty Maritime Law Conference Contact: Danielle Daly – 312/988-5708	Sheraton New Orleans New Orleans, LA

Hypertext citation linking was created with Drafting Assistant from Thomson Reuters, a product that provides all the tools needed to draft and review – right within your word processor. Thomson Reuters Legal is a Premier Section Sponsor of the ABA Tort Trial & Insurance Practice Section, and this software usage is implemented in connection with the Section's sponsorship and marketing agreements with Thomson Reuters. Neither the ABA nor ABA Sections endorse non-ABA products or services. Check if you have access to Drafting Assistant by contacting your Thomson Reuters representative.

Member Roster

Chair

Adam Fuller
Brennan Manna & Diamond
75 E Market St
Akron, OH 44308-2010
(330) 374-6737
Fax: (330) 374-6821
adfuller@bmdllc.com

Chair-Elect,
Membership
Vice-Chair

Janelle Edwards-Stewart
Porzio Bromberg & Newman PC
100 Southgate Parkway
Morristown, NJ 07962-1997
(973) 889-4092
jedwardsstewart@pbnlaw.com

Immediate Past Chair

Meredith McDonald
Hall & Evans LLC
1001 Seventeenth St, Ste 300
Denver, CO 80202-2084
(303) 628-3379
Fax: (303) 860-2869
mcdonaldm@hallevans.com

Diversity
Vice-Chair

Ashley Kelley
Womble Bond Dickinson US LLP
PO Box 999
Charleston, SC 29402-0999
(843) 720-4679
Fax: (843) 723-7398
ashley.kelley@wbd-us.com

Plaintiff
Vice-Chair

Florence Johnson
Johnson & Johnson, PLLC
1407 Union, Ste 1002
Memphis, TN 38104
(901) 7257520
Fax: (901) 522-8219
fjohnson@johnsonandjohnsonattys.com

Editor

Kate Bally
Thomson Reuters Practical Law
3 Times Square, 17th Fl
New York, NY 10036
(646) 223-9881
kate.bally@thomsonreuters.com

Technology
Vice-Chair,
Social Media
Vice-Chair

Katherine Poirier
Borden Ladner Gervais LLP
1000 Rue De La Gauchetire Ouest
Bureau, Ste 900
Montreal, QC H3B 5H4
(514) 954-3175
KPoirier@blg.com

Council Representative

Kay Hodge
Stoneman Chandler & Miller LLP
99 High St, Ste 1302
Boston, MA 02110-2375
(617) 542-6789
Fax: (617) 556-8989
khodge@scmlp.com

Scope Liaison

Joshua Blosveren
*Hoguet Newman Regal
& Kenney LLP*
60 E 42nd St, Fl 26
New York, NY 10165-3003
(212) 689-8808
Fax: (212) 689-5101
jblosveren@hnrklaw.com

Vice-Chairs

Zascha Abbott
Liebler, Gonzalez, & Portuondo
PO Box 347924
Miami, FL 33234
(305) 610-2843
zba@lgplaw.com

Brian Bank
Rivkin Radler LLP
926 Rxr Plaza
Uniondale, NY 11556-3823
(516) 357-3000
Fax: (516) 357-3333
brian.bank@rivkin.com

David Becker
Freeborn & Peters LLP
311 S Wacker Dr, Ste 3000
Chicago, IL 60606-6679
(312) 360-6391
Fax: (312) 360-6594
davidsbecker@gmail.com

Peter Biging
Goldberg Segalla LLP
711 3rd Ave, Ste 1900
New York, NY 10017-4043
(646) 292-8711
Fax: (646) 292-8701
pbiging@goldbergsegalla.com

Natalie Bolling
1200 Urban Center Drive
Birmingham, AL 35242
(205) 298-3625
Fax: (205) 488-3802
bollingn@vmcmail.com

Lindsey Gil
Peabody Arnold LLP
600 Atlantic Ave
Federal Reserve Plaza
Boston, MA 02210
(617) 951-2004
lgil@peabodyarnold.com

Daniel Gunning
Wilson Turner Kosmo LLP
402 West Broadway, Ste 1600
San Diego, CA 92101-3532
(619) 236-9600
dgunning@wilsonturnerkosmo.com

Anthony Kuchulis
Littler Mendelson PC
121 SW Morrison St, Ste 900
Portland, OR 97204-3164
(503) 889-8910
akuchulis@littler.com

Troy Larkin
191 Vinton Cir
Fanwood, NJ 07023-1529
(520) 909-1769
Fax: (949) 607-5650
troy.e.larkin@gmail.com

Sandra McCandless
Dentons
One Market Plaza,
Spear Tower, 24th Fl
San Francisco, CA 94105
(415) 882-2412
Fax: (415) 882-0300
sandra.mccandless@dentons.com

Molly Meacham
Babst, Calland, Clements and Zomnir, P.C.
Two Gateway Center, 9th Fl
603 Stanwix St
Pittsburgh, PA 15222
(412) 394-5614
mmeacham@babstcalland.com

Brian Miller
Royston Rayzor
802 N Carancahua St, Ste 1300
Corpus Christi, TX 78401
(361) 884-8808
Fax: (361) 884-7261
brian.miller@roystonlaw.com

Roscoe Mutz
Farhang & Medcoff, PLLC
4801 E Broadway Blvd, Ste 311
Tucson, AZ 85711
(520) 790-5433
rmutz@farhangmedcoff.com

David Pardue
Parker Poe Adams & Bernstein LLP
336 Lands Mill Road SE
Marietta, GA 30067
(404) 889-1866
davidpardue@parkerpoe.com

Robert Redemann
2816 E 27th St
Tulsa, OK 74114-4316
(918) 693-5057
Fax: (918) 382-1499
redemann@pmlaw.net

Matthew Schiff
Sugar, Felsenthal Grais and Helsinger
30 N. LaSalle St, Ste 3000
Chicago, IL 60602
1 (312) 7042171
Fax: (312) 454-9500
mschiff@sfg.com

Martine Wells
Brownstein Hyatt Farber Schreck
410 17th St, Ste 2200
Denver, CO 80202
(303) 223-1100
Fax: (303) 223-1111
mwells@bhfs.com

Amy Wilson
Frost Brown Todd LLC
201 N Illinois St, Ste 1900
Indianapolis, IN 46204-4236
(317) 237-3481
Fax: (317) 237-3900
awilson@fbtlaw.com